Purpose

• To understand concerns of expanding the trails to the black business community and customers that support those businesses.
Hi everyone! This isn’t a business related post but it relates to our community and I need some type of feedback for a presentation at my job.

My organization is seeking to expand the trail (walking and biking) network to underrepresented communities. This gives the ability to better quality of life, accessibility to businesses (with connection to BOB per a conversation I had with my supervisor), a growth of revenue for those same business...etc. The same communities that have been red zoned for decades are going to be the primary target for the infrastructure. My question is to everyone is that if the trails were placed (which they have started the expansion of one in particular...I can verify the location once I double check) what concerns would you have? What positives could you see? Would YOU be comfortable?

Depending on the area would depend on the concerns. Some areas have more crime, some not enough lighting etc. Positives would be the upgrading of the area.

Having multiple parking lots / access points along the trail I think not only helps with having available parking but also limits the likeliness of crime and or unwitnessed crime if people are constantly entering into the park at different areas and intervals of time. Having multiple park rangers along the trail helps too. I was just thinking to Options for disabled folks (there are tons of elderly in wheelchairs in my neighborhood, for example), safe and accessible curb ramps, good lighting, and routine trash collection because we unfortunately still have a huge issue with folks throwing trash out their car windows or placing fast food bags outside on the ground before they pull out of a parking lot. I would also want to ensure that small alcoves that have become havens for our unhoused population are not taken over at their expense, because there really aren’t enough shelters for them to go to. This is such a great idea. Thank you for leading this!

Options for disabled people (the grade of the path, density of benches, path material) who have canes or walkers. Maybe some small pavilions or shelters.
Comments – Theme 2: Is this really for us?

Is the purpose for gentrification? Have they sent out surveys for the community. Lighting, safe trails, etc. What neighborhood. We need a lil more info. But great idea if it’s truly to serve the purpose that they are saying.

I went to a board meeting regarding trails in Ohio, there was no one of color there. They had a deer in the headlights look when I showed. Lots of work to do.

What an incredible project!! This sounds amazing. My biggest concern would be community buy-in. That the community feels trails were created “with” the community, not “for” the community without trying to understand their wants/needs/environment. The K...
while doing it. Creating groups on social media in regards to this I think helps foster connections in this typically untapped social setting. I have been wanting to make friends and new connections since moving here but have a lack of social connections and rarely go out to the typical weekly social settings, so a park group for me would be the perfect opportunity 😊 It’s true when I’ve been on the trails I have very seldom seen faces like my own ❤️ For us POC something about seeing someone that looks like yourself in an area not typical for our people to frequent makes me feel included, connected and most importantly SAFE. This is why this is an awesome project and is so important thank you for listening to our/my feedback 😊😊😊

Jasmine Walker absolutely! If you want the worst ACT parking areas that I’ve encountered, feel free to PM me!

Actually, I can go on and on about Columbus trails for days, so if you need more feedback, feel free to PM me! 😊

Jasmine Walker AGREE! Also, if you’re looking for more diverse voices, Facebook has a couple great hiking groups for Columbus. The Unlikely Hiker caters to POC, women, people with disabilities, etc. They’re a great resource. It might be worth it for you to post inquiries there as well!

Also, this could be a business related post if you teamed up with a developer and the right visionaries to transform these abandoned malls and factory buildings into indoor walking trails. Some ideas can turn into profit!

Further Outreach

How can we begin to use engagement strategies like this to expand participation in COG efforts?
THANK YOU!
